I am a Computer Engineering Technology student with strong capabilities in full-stack development, workflow automation, and AI-driven solution design. I build end-to-end systems that integrate APIs, databases, low-code automation tools, and real-time processes to address practical business needs. Through hands-on projects, competition achievements, and internship experience, I have developed solid skills in problem-solving, requirement analysis, technical communication, and solution implementation. I am highly adaptable, fast-learning, and motivated to contribute to customer-focused solutions that leverage modern software engineering and AI integration.
